Got Cuticura. In 3 Days Relief. in a Week Cured Without a Mark.

"I have a little baby almost a year old. When it was two months old it got eczema on top of both her hands, on her face and broke into sores. Her mother refused to drink any more milk and the baby was almost choked up. A hard crust formed and would crack open and the blood ran out.

It itched so frightfully that the poor little girl could not rest. We had to keep mitts on her hands to keep her from scratching at her face and her mother was forced to the baby in a rocking chair with the baby day and night. We went to the doctor and he gave us a very good doctor and he told all that he possibly could to relieve the baby's torture but the results were not what we had looked for.

"We had read of the Cuticura remedy so we went to the store and got some Cuticura soap and Cuticura ointment. We used them just as directed and in three days the crust began to come off. In a week there was no more scab and now the baby is as healthy as a mark, sleeps soundly in her cradle and her parents in their bed, with no more sleepless nights because of the baby's suffering. Cuticura has cured the baby of her skin disease and any one having eczema should not delay in getting it. Henry M. Ford,

SHOOTS CANADIAN LYNX AT FARMINGTON

FARMINGTON, N. H., Nov. 16.—The first Canadian lynx captured in this vicinity in twenty years was shot by Phil Whittier, a local trapper, in West Farmington. Whittier's dog started the animal out of the woods. Whittier fired one shot and wounded the lynx. It took to a tree and Whittier then fired a second and killed it. The lynx tipped the scales at twenty-five pounds. Whittier brought the animal to Farmington and claimed a bounty of $100.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 16.—A mystery of fourteen years concerning the fate of the Austrian scientific expedition from the ship Albatross is cleared by the finding of the remains of the expedition in the Bismarck Islands.

SAVES WIFE AND BABES IN FIRE

In the intense cold of the early morning, Nathan Levine today carried his wife and two little children out of the burning home in Lynn.

Joseph A. Levine, eight years old, dived into the fire and ran from the second floor into the yard and to the nearby work shop of the father. The boy was clad only in his nightgown. The father ran into the burning house and carried out Mrs. Levine and his daughter Anna, three years old, to safety.

The house was completely wrecked. The damage will be about $2,000. The cause is unknown.

WAR SCARE IS OVER IN TEXAS

ROCK SPRING, Tex., Nov. 16.—Scores of arrests are being made along the Rio Grande by the Mexican authorities, who are serving the double purpose of quelling the threatened political revolt against President Diaz and of checking the anti-American feeling.

Although the "border army" of 300 Mexicans reported to be on the way here to across the burning of Antonio Hotel, guns could not be located by range riders today. This country is an armed camp with 1,000 men armed and on the alert. The sale of drink has been stopped and no drink will be sold to Mexicans.

80 REPORTED DEAD IN LAKE

SEASIDE, Minn., Nov. 16.—T. Steamer Wagon, with a crew of fourteen and a passenger list of thirty six, is believed to be lost in Lake Superior. No trace can be found of the vessel.

A cable came through the report today that the ship had foundered and that seventy of its crew had perished. The rumor denied that it was possible for some of the survivors to have taken refuge on some of the small islands in the lake if the ship had really gone down. In fact, even the survivors would not be able to leave the islands until the lake froze over.

PATIENCE—The Right Kind and the Wrong Kind

The Man Who Is Patient at the Right Time, and Impatient at the Right Time, Is One Who Understands Part of the Philosophy of Life

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal Company

This newspaper published an editorial on agitation, and is now asked to write about "PATIENCE."

Few words in our language have more meanings than the word patience. This word means "to suffer," according to etymology. But to our ears it means rather to endure, to bear, something that is disagreeable, for a result that is more important than the discomfort undergone.

In almost all the literature of all the countries, patience is praised. It should be praised. The patient man, the long-enduring man who can stand discomfort, who can endure stupidity and even injustice, with an object to be achieved, is the wise man.

But when you preach patience to yourself, or when you preach patience to your children, or to your employees, be careful to discriminate between wise patience and foolish patience.

It is wise to be patient with those who are doing their best, however feeble that "best."

It is wise to be patient with the weak, the ignorant. For impatience with ignorance is cruelty.

It is wise to be patient, when patience is required by that which is to come later—even though patience may almost cease to be a virtue in the practice of it.

And when you criticize others for their impatience, begin always by putting yourself in the other's place.

You see a man or a woman impatient with employees, and you criticize him or her.

What do you do with your own employees? Or, if you are employed, how do you act toward your employer?

Do you exercise with the customer upon whom you wait as much patience as you think the floorwalker or the boss should show toward you?

That is the main thing for a man to get right—the relation between himself and the outside world, as compared with the relation which he expects others to maintain toward him.

Patience which means courage and fortitude is a virtue.

Patience which means incapacity to rebel is a weakness.

Patience which helps those that are feeble is kindness.

And patience which weakly endures the contempt or the ill-treatment of those that are strong is cowardice.

Patience in work is of course a virtue always. And it is always the cornerstone of success.

The most patient great man in our country was George Washington. He was beaten in one battle after another. And always patiently he reformed his army, only to be beaten again.

His friends deserted him, newspapers attacked him, his soldiers left him, battles were lost, the armies were dispersed, the States were complaining—still Washington was patient—and he won.

And just as patient was that other great American, Lincoln. Patient in the abuse showered upon him when he was doing his best.

patient with the generals like McClellan, who defied or ignored his orders; patient with public opinion that praised him after a victory and denounced him after defeat; patient even on his deathbed, when the great work that he had done ended in assassination.

Every really great life is a life of patience, whether it be that of a mother, giving her days and her nights to the care of the child that is to do great work; that of the scientist studying the distant realms for new stars and new truths, or that of the man trying to teach others and getting only contempt for his claim.

Very old is the French saying:

"Patience et longueur de temps font plus que force ni violence."

(Patience and length of time do more than force or violence.)

Remember this: "The most patient man is the wisest and the most far-seeing."

The most impatient man is the ignorant.

It is the patient man that trains the horse to do the strangest, most difficult tricks.

It is the impatient and ignorant man that beats the poor animal committed to his care.

It is the patient man who wins, and the most patient is the most broadly victorious. The man with the biggest mind is the most patient—for it is he who can look ahead and around and realize that time and patience will conquer.

We Receive a Poem from Miss Cattapani

It is Entitled "Daddy, Come Home," and Announces That Baby Has the "Measles."

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal Company

The poem we print here is like coals sent to Newcastle.

But there is something unusual in the poem that we print to-day, and we could not make up our mind to reject it.

Here it is:

DADDY, COME HOME

They say that you're left us, Daddy,
Have left our mother and me;
But I tell them, carefully, Daddy,
That that, oh, never can be!

I watch all day at the window
And listen at night in the hall;
I cry till I sleep, dear Daddy,
When I do not see you at all!

I wish you'd come back, dear Daddy,
You never stayed as before;
I pray for you nightly, dear Daddy,
And miss you, oh, more and more.

That what has become of you, Daddy?
Mother does nothing but sigh;
You did not say you were going
You did not tell me "good-bye!"

The baby has got the measles
And looks so funny and red;
And little Johnny, your favorite,
Oh, Johnny, dear Daddy, is dead!

They say there's a quarrel with mother
That drove you, dear Daddy, to roam;
But, Daddy, she loves you dearly—
Oh, Daddy, dear Daddy, come home!

HENRIETTA GARINER CATTAPANI

The lady who sends this poem and to whom we are greatly obliged assures us that every statement in the poem is true.

Doubtless many fathers who have run away from home will be touched by this poem and go back home again.

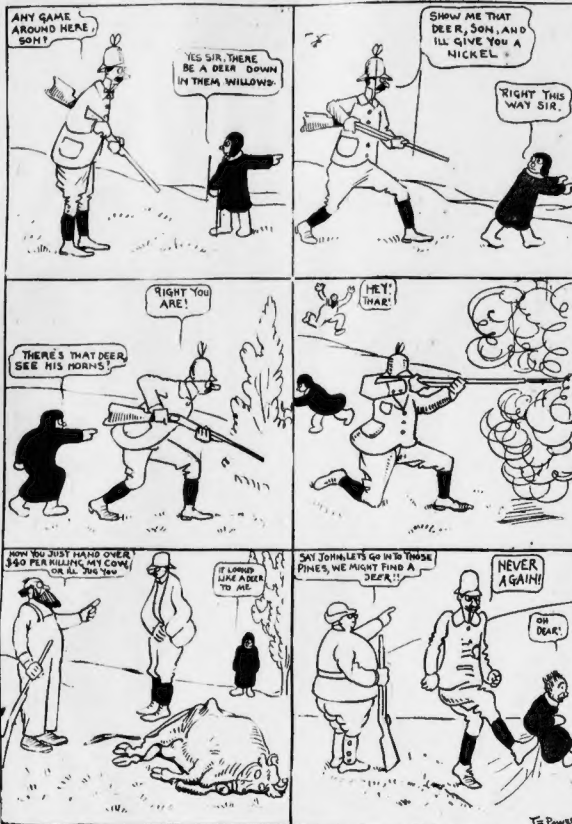

And many fathers that have not YET run away from home will probably make up their minds to stick it out and stay at home for many years after they read this.

We hope so.

Highest Finance

By MORTON BIRGE

(An Aviation Trust has been formed—News Item.)

SOME captains of wealth have invented their means in capitalizing flying machines.

They'll bond 'em and stock 'em and probably say:
"This stock cannot help going up right away."

Of course they will water this airy combine
And then, in the regular stock-jobbing line,
They'll put up the price to meet the advance—
For this is, in earnest, the highest finance.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About
His Adventures in Maine

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WHEN I was away up in the Maine woods with Pa & Ma, my hair got so long that I had to have it cut, & Pa took me over to the barber shop to have it cut. Pa had to have a share, too, in the chair first, because it doesn't last so long to get a share I heard Pa telling the barber that he cut out & spent a couple while his son was getting a hair cut.

The minute Pa got in the chair, the barber began to talk to him, & Pa didn't like to have a barber talk to him he was shaving. Pa always said that he was so used to having barbers talk to him he was getting shaved that he was shaving himself with a safety razor he talked to himself.

Well, and the barber, how do you like the country around here?

It seems due to me, said Pa, especially horses & sold them to a city feller. The city feller paid his good coin for them, & then had to give the horses up. He beats his wife, too.

Do you know a Master Hollowell said Pa
he & I had a long chat over in the last place, & I sort of took to him. I know him, and the barber. But he drinks too much and gambles all the time. They said one that half of the time his folks haven't enough to eat, & he is always talking about rummy, his knees.

Does he really knock? said Pa. I didn't think anybody around here would do such things as knock. I am surprised. He spoke very highly of everybody last time he was in. He is a great friend of Art Sawyer.

You know Art? I know him, said the barber. That kid will never amount to much unless he stops dreaming about being a professional baseball player. He makes me tired, said

Pa, when I am out in the woods fishing or hunting. I don't like the town part of it at all. When that he does in the summer, the shaved, why, and the barber, don't mean pull, but it sort of skins over the stubble.

Do you like the folks you have met here?
asked the barber. I like most of them very much, said Pa. The only peep I have met so far that I don't like is the peep that is all the time asking questions. Well, have you met many of our leading citizens? said the barber. No, said Pa, I haven't met them all, but I have met some of them. I met a very charming old gentleman last time that lives out as much as three or four miles from here.
His name is Black. Do you know him?

Sure I know him, said the barber. He is a bump. Half of the time his family back in the town. Last winter he stole three horses & sold them to a city feller. The city feller paid his good coin for them,

& then had to give the horses up. He beats his wife, too.

Do you know a Master Hollowell said Pa
he & I had a long chat over in the last place, & I sort of took to him. I know him, and the barber. But he drinks too much and gambles all the time. They said one that half of the time his folks haven't enough to eat, & he is always talking about rummy, his knees.
